Barry Schilmeister, F.S.A., M.A.A.A., Partner, Mercer

Barry is a Partner in Mercer's Health and Benefits business, working with both Mercer's New York and Connecticut consulting offices. He has been involved in insurance, benefits and actuarial work for over thirty years, most of that time in group benefits consulting and the last seventeen with Mercer.

As an actuary and senior consultant at Mercer, Barry advises large employers on the strategic planning, structure, and financing of their group benefit programs, focused largely on health care. His work has covered the full range of benefits, including active employees and retirees, insured and self-funded arrangements, health management programs, benefits benchmarking, flexible benefits, and, most recently, the impact of health care reform. Barry is the New York spokesperson for Mercer's National Survey of Employer-Sponsored Health Plans, the largest survey of its kind.
