Organizations that will not only survive but thrive in the future will have sound business models and the ability to execute strategy in the most focused and efficient manner possible. Effective and timely execution requires the involvement and commitment of staff at all levels in a culture that redirects energy from negative to positive and emphasizes development, empowerment and accountability.

The speakers will share a simple framework and expose you to techniques to effectively mobilize teams through use of existing talent and developing future talent to gain the energy of team members. Participants will be better equipped managers and leaders to work side-by-side with people, helping both to achieve business results and maximize others' potential.
